

Our Place presents a group poem inspired by "Still I Rise" by Maya Angelou

People are upset about COVID-19 because it's scary. But we are brave and helpful, so still, I rise. When I am working at my job, some people are mean. Some people get in my space. But I am open-minded, so I still rise.

I got help from a friend and picked out my classes for Spring Session.
Still, I rise.

Colors are beautiful and still I rise.
Our Place is beautiful and still I rise.
Wearing my mask is hard and still I rise.

BELLA

Still, I rise,
Above the clouds,
Against the odds.
No matter what obstacles are placed in my path,
I shall overcome the relentless tide of challenges.
Like a virus, rising and falling with the waves.
Like friends arriving and leaving, new and old, flowing with the times.
Yet I still persevere.
Still, I rise.

I rise.

I rise.

I am different, I change like colors in the morning when I wake up. Still, I rise.
People need help and I am kind, so still, I rise.

I leave behind sadness and bring forward my past, and still, I rise.

I bring gifts to others like my laugh and my writing, still I rise.

Yet, does my swag unsettle you? Why are you plagued with darkness? "Because I walk with confidence and pride like I am shining in my own pursuit of happiness.

I am a descendant of slaves that have set the foundation for generations to come before me. In spite of, obstacles and uncertainty. I rise above skeptics and doubters in the world.
